Sheep Shearing Yoke. A correspondent of the Wisconsin Farmer tells of a sort of pillory which he has invented for holding sheep to be shorn: "I took a stick of timber six inches square and five feet long: about ten inches from the end of the stick, I cut out a piece big enough for a sheep's neck to lie in it ,that is, about three inches deep, and then I took two pieces of some lighter timber, each piece about two feet long, and cut out enough of each to make it sufficiently large for the sheep's neck to lay easy in. I then took two the late General Meagher was fond of small butts and screws and hung them telling was the following: He was affording light produced by the honest manufacturer." to the bottom piece, and use a hook and staples on each end to hold it down: and two of them, because two men can use it each other's way, by laying one sheep point and captured several colors. one way and another the other way. I lay this on the barn floor, and it is a great deal easier than twisting them so much. I shear their necks down to their Meagher, "a private, who was plunging 44 MILES FROM NEW YORK, ON RAILROAD shoulders, and then lay them down and along, out of one muddy hole into anput the neck in, and they lie perfectly other, looked up to me and said : easy. I shear one side, and then roll them over without taking them out. I can shear a great deal easier than in the old way, and for the sheep it is much

His Cows Always Do Well.

In a letter to the New York Farmers' Club, Mr. J. L. Humphrey of New Wheelock, equal to five fiers of lot- or so much thereof as may be thought advisable. Bedford, gives the following account of August 17, 1867. the management by which his cows are exempt from eaked bag, and other diseases which afflict many dairies :-

"I never had any trouble in that direction, no matter how fat the cow may be at the time of calving. I keep the best cows that I can get, and find it most profitable for my purpose to have them calve only once in eighteen months. I feed moderately on grain-generally oats and corn mixed, with the addition of roots during the winter-so that my cows, though they may milk down thin during the first six or eight months, will always come up again before I dry them off. I never let them go dry less than two months,-three is better if it occurs in summer, and I always take away the FANCY GOODS, that the time is quiesly coming when it will be necessary for them to make their selections and give their orders for grain as soon as they are dry, and sometimes before, if too much inclined to milk. For two or three weeks before calving I keep them on a spare but laxative diet-if in winter early out hay or Claremont Manufacturing Company corn fodder and bay with a few roots but an straw. After calving give one pound of Epsom salts, and a few hours Desire to inform the trade that they expect soon to be after a warm brown much-scalding the bran with boiling water-commencing to feed a little hay in twelve hours from and to say that they will be happy to hear from any ealving, and gradually increasing to full feed after two or three days. Since I cable, have adopted this course I have had no trouble with the bag but what would readily yield to a few applications of hot heart by which they will have the exclusive sale of water followed by dry rubbing."
